

Comparison of Hakko FX-951 to Weller WD1002 Soldering Station

Features

- * Lockout key card prevents accidental temperature settings
- * Low temperature alarm
- * Soldering iron included, uses quick change composite tips
- * Sleep mode functionality
- * Auto shutoff
- * Compact for space saving
- * Superior heat transfer and thermal recovery
- * Specifications operating temperature
- * Station / Tool Power Consumption
- * Temperature Stability
- * Output voltage
- * Tip-to-Ground Resistance
- * Tip-to-Ground Potential
- * Cord Length
- * Tip cost
- * Tip Change
- * No Tip Included
- * No Temperature Scrolling Function
- * Each Temperature Setting Must Be Individually Selected Between 0- 9

Hakko FX-951

Key Required
 Yes
 Yes at $15.00 + ea.
 Yes - 1 to 29 minutes
 Yes - 30 minutes
 3.15 x 5.15 x 5.16 Weight 2.6
 15 seconds to heat up
 400° - 840° F
 75 / 70 W
 9° F
 24 V
 <2 ohms
 <2 mv
 4 ft.
 $15.00 +
 Tips difficult to replace
See Video here

Weller WD1002

No Key required - Code number used - No key to lose
No alarm needed - Actual temperature always shown
Yes with choice of 8 hand pieces - Tip costs of $3.72
Yes -1 to 99 minutes Stop and Go stand available
Yes - 1 to 999 minutes
Weight 8.5 lbs. - Stays Put 5.27 x 4.25 x 5.77
 24 seconds to heat up
150° - 850° F
95 / 80 W
 9° F
 24 V
 <2 ohms
5 ft.
$3.72
Easily changed even hot with no tools
Three programmable temperature presets buttons
Stop and Go stand available for temperature set back
F/C switching
Temp. offset allows displayed temp to be adjusted ±72°F
Two barrel lengths available
Dry Cleaner available to replace sponge in original stand
Totally adjustable stand - 4 position Tilt 30 -80 degrees
Hot tip change easy with no heating pad required

RED Highlight = Improved performance or feature